"THERE is no excuse for mistaking or misapprehending the feeling and the temper of the rank and file of Democracy. They are determined under the assertion that their party fails in ability to manage the government, and they are apprehensive that efforts to bring about tariff reform may fail; but they are much more determined and apprehensive in their fear that Democratic principles may be surrendered."

—CLEVELAND'S LETTER TO WILSON.

"HOW can we face the people after including in such outrageous discriminations and violations of principle?"

—CLEVELAND'S LETTER TO WILSON.

How Now?

What will the civil service reform President say to the Wayne county Democratic killing, in which United States Marshal Vinson figures as leader of the killing forces? What will the grand jury say?

Slippery Wool "Slips."

The Democratic politicians are showing their desperation over the wool question. The vote of the wool producer is going away from them, and they are making a sublimely ridiculous effort to hold it.

Part of the Register's silly effort of yesterday was quoted from "a slip" issued by the Democratic congressional campaign committee, of which Senator Faulkner is chairman.

This slippery "slip" pretends to quote from the American Wool and Cotton Reporter to show that wool prices "have increased fully 10 per cent for all grades of domestic, while prices for foreign wool have declined in some instances 4 per cent." This is precisely and specifically untrue. The fact is the very opposite. Since the passage of the free wool bill the quotations in the seaport markets are from 10 to 20 cents for XX and above, an average decline of 3 cents a pound. The decline would have been greater except that the market has been discounting free wool.

With regard to foreign wools, instead of declining 4 per cent they have advanced from 5 per cent to 10 per cent in London in view of the free market in this country.

The Register will perceive how unsafe it is to follow the leading of "slips" sent out by its campaign committee. Those slippery "slips" can hardly be intended to be used in newspapers, where they will attract attention and make trouble. The idea must be to work the back districts with them.

Wool Growers will be glad to know that the Register can sell their wool for them at 23 to 26 cents a pound—in its mind. If the Register loses its mind the deal won't go.

A Statement of Fact Versus a Very Measly Fake.

Colonel North, of Short Creek, this county, who is one of four farmers in that section who are still holding on to their wool, noticing the statement in yesterday's Register that wool was bringing fancy prices those good times for farmers, particularly a communication in that paper to the effect that wool had sold up to 25 cents in Monroe county, Ohio, informs the INTELLIGENCER that he would be glad indeed to get any such figure for his wool.

The best bid Colonel North knows of, however, is 16 cents, and he thinks it remarkably strange that Monroe county wools should bring 25 cents, or even 23 cents, or 20 cents, or 18 cents, when Pan-Handle wools, that stand so much higher in the market, will bring only 16 cents.

As a possible explanation of this tremendous advance—in the Register office—for wool, Colonel North informs us that the McCulloch brothers (Miller and Alexander) recently sold 225 fat sheep at Pittsburgh, picked out of a flock of 700 to 800, at 41 cents per head. This, he says, is a fact and not a newspaper fake, and in view of it, as also in view of the well known price for wool, he wonders that the Register, or any correspondent thereof, should thus play the farmers for fools.

By way of corroborating Colonel North's statement as to the price of wool, we may say for the benefit of those buyers who are so busy picking up soft snags in wool over in Monroe county at 23 to 26 cents, that if they will only cross over to this side of the river and visit this town, they will find in warehouses here several hundred thousand pounds of Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Ohio standard wools which they can secure at prices so much below what they are paying—through the Register office—in Monroe county, that the two figures are not to be named in the same day.

So now is the time for an object lesson on the wool question. Bring in those Monroe county buyers. Champagne and cake and a brass band await them here. All the schools will suspend in order to give the children a chance to see what they look like.

WANTED—Wool at 23 to 26 cents a pound. Apply at the Register office.

Comparisons Suggested by the "Register."

There was reason to fear that the nomination of Mr. Dayton by the Republicans of the Second district would not be cordially ratified by the esteemed Register. This dark apprehension has been realized in its worst form. The Register speaks of Mr. Dayton as "an individual unknown to fortune and to fame."

It is true that Mr. Dayton is without fortune, but he is well known in his district and outside of it as a man of character and a lawyer of ability. He is very much better known to the people of his district than Wm. L. Wilson was when he was first named for Congress, and he is much better known than the Democratic nominee in the First district is to the people of this district.

Mr. Dayton is one of the most effective speakers in the state, and the changed political condition of Barbours, due in a large measure to his tireless and intelligent efforts, tells something of his ability as a vote-getter. As to his fame, he will have enough of that to satisfy the craving of any reasonable man when the news shall be flashed over the country that the young champion of protection has slain the free trade professor.

The Register discovers further that the Republican nominee is but thirty-seven years old "and early developed a thirst for office-holding." Mr. Dayton is old enough to be President of the United States, and he is about the same age as Mr. Howard, Democratic nominee for Congress in the First district.

As to Mr. Dayton's thirst for office, he has held but one public place, that of prosecuting attorney of his county, and then he made a model officer. Mr. Howard, Democratic nominee in the First district, has held a miscellaneous assortment of public places through a good many years and is now ambitious to step out of the public position he holds into another. Mr. Howard will not get the place he is after, but this does not change the fact that he has the "thirst" spoken of by the Register.

We beg to assure the Register that Mr. Dayton is neither too young nor too thirsty for the people of his district. Furthermore he is "all right."

THE INTELLIGENCER congratulates Messrs. Horkheimer Bros. on the fabulous fortune they must have made this year on their wool handling—always supposing that they have sold or can sell at the Register's Monroe county prices. Those enterprising merchants should be 'way up in G.

CONGRESSMAN CAPEHART's desertion in the face of the enemy makes Democratic success in the Fourth district next to impossible. The nomination which he flings back in the face of his party is not worth having.

For Democratic wool growers only! No others need apply. From 23 to 26 cents a pound will be paid for unwashed wool by the unwashed Register. Come early and avoid the rush.

SPRINKLING of suspensions on account of the Wayne county political butchery, somebody may be suspended from a rope.

THE federal officeholders of West Virginia continue to be in evidence in these Democratic times.

VERMONT Democrats have gone Republican this year.

RANDOM POLITICAL NOTES.

The week just closing has been filled with interesting political events in this state. The most important, and one that is significant of the intense feeling existing between the Democratic factions in certain sections of the state, was the riot in Wayne county, which culminated in bloodshed and murder. Another event of the deepest significance was the withdrawal of the Democratic nominee for Congress in the Fourth district, because of the factional warfare which has doomed the party to defeat in that district. Two other important happenings were the nominations of Republican candidates for Congress in the Second and Fourth districts under peculiarly gratifying circumstances. The first two events have discouraged and disgusted the Democratic managers, and the second two have inspired the Republicans with enthusiasm and hope. Altogether the conditions are such that the Republicans of West Virginia find in them no reason to feel discouraged over the outlook; while, on the other hand, there is much cause for Democratic depression. On the one side are increased evidences of the Democratic house being fatally divided against itself, while on the other side, the Republicans still maintain a united front, and are full of the spirit which augurs success. This means that they are thoroughly alive to the situation and are closing up the ranks for an earnest, aggressive fight to win.

The southern method of politics adopted by United States Marshal Vinson and his deputies in the prosecution of their campaign for Senator Camden has at length culminated, as everybody expected it would, in riot and bloodshed, and if the final outcome isn't a hanging tree it will be because the officers of the law fail to do their duty. That the victim of the tragedy was a peace-maker who was attempting to stop the war of the Democratic factions, is the saddest part of the whole affair. Had the man killed been one of the instigators of the riot the result would not have been so regrettable. As it was, the murdered man was an innocent party, and the disgraceful contest that is being carried on between the partisans of Senator Johnson N. Camden and ex-Governor Wilson within the Democratic party for the United States senatorship is directly responsible for the crime. Neither Mr. Camden nor Mr. Wilson was personally involved, but their belligerent friends and supporters, who have been permitted to carry on their disgraceful style of campaign unchecked by their principals, were, and to that extent the two gentlemen will be held responsible by public opinion. Senator Camden's attention was called time and time again to the methods of bull-dozing adopted by his supporter, United States Marshal Vinson, but so far as the public is aware, he has done nothing toward calling the marshal off. When, some weeks ago this official, in defiance of the rules that govern the civil service of the United States, with a gang of deputies, all office-holders under the administration and by the appointment of President Cleveland, attempted, by armed interference, to control the Democratic primaries at Huntington, a bloody tragedy almost resulted. The indignant citizens of that place promptly preferred charges at Washington and a special agent was sent from the capital to investigate the affair. That the investigation was a farce was evidenced by the fact that Marshal Vinson was not summarily dismissed from office, but was permitted to officially live to fight another day in the interest of his friend and "influence," Senator Camden.

Royal Baking Powder

Emboldened by the evident favor with which his peculiar methods were regarded by our great civil service reform administration at Washington, Marshal Vinson continued in his course, and scarcely a week has passed since the Huntington occurrence that has not witnessed some similar disgraceful act of interference with the right of Democratic opponents to assemble and express their opinions. Local conventions in southern counties have met to find the marshal, or one or more of his deputies, present to intimidate by threats, or to bulldoze by the display of knives and revolvers. Every week the newspapers have been called upon to chronicle some disgraceful affair at a Democratic convention in which these pernicious active office-holders have figured, and still no attention has been paid to the matter by the powers at Washington; nor has it become a matter of public knowledge that Senator Camden has lifted up his voice in denunciation of methods of which, if successful, he will be the beneficiary. Ex-Governor Wilson and his friends have met Vinson and showed fight on every occasion and have been parties to the disgraceful occurrences, but they are not so culpable as the Camden supporters, for they are not holders of federal offices, and are not making use of the prestige and power vested in them by official commissions to prosecute their ends. Democrats in this portion of the state have little appreciation of the state of affairs in the southern counties growing out of the fight there, because they are so far removed from the seat of war, but they have been kept posted by the press dispatches, and were not surprised to read that on Monday, at Ravenswood, the attempt of Marshal Vinson to speak in a Wilson meeting almost culminated in a bloody tragedy; and, again, that, on Tuesday, at Ludlow, in Wayne county, a similar Vinson move did culminate in a fearful riot, during which six men were wounded, one, James Frizzell, being killed, and that United States Marshal Vinson was accused of firing the fatal shot. That Vinson is the slayer of Frizzell remains to be proven. His friends say that the ball that did the killing did not come from Vinson's revolver.

In the meantime the interesting question arises, what is going to be done about it at Washington? Is Marshal Vinson going to be retained in office to continue his bulldozing tactics for Mr. Camden? And what do the respectable, law-abiding Democrats of West Virginia think of the whole disgraceful campaign that is being carried on in behalf of the only two avowed Democratic candidates for the United States senate, one of whom, Camden, expects to receive the votes of the Democratic members of the legislature from Ohio and other counties of the northern portion of the state, if elected? Is it any wonder that Democrats are disgusted with their party affairs in West Virginia? Every law-abiding citizen of West Virginia, every man who believes in a free vote and a fair count is interested in knowing whether United States Marshal Vinson whose conduct of Senator Camden's campaign has been a history of pugilistic encounters, riots and bloodshed, and interference with the deliberations of county conventions, is to be retained in office. If he is to be permitted to thus interfere in the affairs of his own party and the conduct of his own party primaries and elections, what may we not expect from him and his deputies at the polls in November? It is still fresh in the public mind that, under the last Democratic administration, Democratic marshals were present at the polls in the city of Wheeling to intimidate the voters, the first time such a thing was known in West Virginia. On account of the public indignation then expressed it is unlikely that similar tactics will ever be resorted to again by the Democratic managers in Wheeling, but in the southern counties of the state where the present war of the Democratic factions is the warmest, a public sentiment that permits the interference of administration office-holders in party primaries might not be strong enough to resist their pernicious activity at the polls in a general election.

The withdrawal of Mr. Capehart, the Democratic nominee for Congress in the Fourth district, was the outcome of the hostility to him which was so manifest in the nominating convention and has been growing ever since. Mr. Capehart's letter of withdrawal is so bitter in its tone that it is not probable his withdrawal will have the effect of harmonizing the elements. He has hosts of friends in the district who sympathize with him in his martyrdom, and the nomination of a member of the opposing faction in his stead will be the signal for a renewal of the war. On the other hand, the nomination of a friend of Capehart will not placate his enemies. A conservative man will be hard to find, for there is not a prominent Democrat in the district who is not identified with one faction or the other. If Hon. D. H. Leonard, Mr. Capehart's late competitor for the nomination, is named the Camden-Wilson fight, of which I have had so much to say above, will be an essential factor in the campaign, for it is in the Fourth district that the feeling is most bitter, and it was in the district that the tragedy of Tuesday occurred. Mr. Leonard is a staunch friend and supporter of Mr. Camden, and the Anti-Camdenites are aching to get a chance at him for past as well as present offenses. A revival of Judge McCluer's late lamented boom may be one of the outcomes of the present situation, but it is not considered likely that the judge will take kindly to a proposition to take him up as a makeshift after having been forced off the track once by the bosses. Altogether the Democracy of the Fourth district is in a sad pickle. The nomination by the Republicans of Judge Warren Miller, an immensely popular, was nominated by a convention remarkable for its entire sinism, and has more Democratic friends than any other Republican in the district. It cannot be said that a party is in good fighting shape when its candidate for Congress is forced to resign from the ticket a week after his nomination, because of disaffection in the ranks, and this is why the Fourth district Democracy is sad.

The Register sneers at Gordon Dayton, the Republican nominee in the Second district against William L. Wilson, because he is a young man and never held but one office. If the Register but knew it, these are sources of strength, because it was the hustling, working, enthusiastic young Republicanism of the Second district that denuded Dayton. It is no disgrace that he never held but one office before. Mr. Wilson, his Democratic competitor, never held any office previous to his election to Congress, and was comparatively little known. He was obliged to be introduced everywhere in his first campaign. There were thousands of people in the district who had never heard of him. Mr. Dayton, the Register will find, is well known among the people. He has made more than one campaign for his party throughout the district, and his brilliant and dashing style has kindled the fires of enthusiasm everywhere. The Register's sneering comments will create such amusement among the intelligent people of the Second district as any similar display of ignorance might create anywhere. Mr. Dayton is one of the coming men of the nation. He is a man of fine intellect, and has, though only thirty-seven years of age, built up a large law practice, and made for himself a name and fame through the state as a man of the highest attainments in his profession and in the business world. He is a hundred times better known in the Second district than Mr. Howard is in the First, and in point of ability is far, very far, Mr. Howard's superior.
